

PACER'S WEWILLGENERATION

STUDENTS LEADING THE BULLYING PREVENTION MOVEMENT

The WE WILL Generation

is an exciting new initiative that uses a students-teaching-students model to build leadership and encourage a change in culture to address bullying. Bullying is an issue that directly impacts children and youth every day. Today's generation of students is ready to take action and uniquely positioned to prevent and stop bullying. What they need is education, support, and inspiration – and a creative program that will give them the practical skills to be part of the solution.

Join the WE WILL Generation

Opportunities for students include:

- post “WE WILL” images through instagram and twitter
- sign the WE WILL generation pledge
- lead student-created activities in the classroom or community
- submit videos for inclusion in the we will curriculum
- share advice from students that is for students

Student-to-student Curriculum

The WE WILL generation features a curriculum, which is:

- available on-line at no cost
- taught “student-to-student”
- designed for student leaders to engage, educate and inspire other students

Why is a Student-to-student Movement Important?

This generation is ready to take action as they recognize that bullying is an issue in which they can be the solution.

- students often have an intrinsic understanding of their social environments and can exercise more “social leverage” with peers than adults.
- students who feel ownership of their communities, and realize that they can make a difference, can be powerful influencers.
- in a student-to-student model, the presenters and the audience both learn powerful lessons about bullying and what they can do to prevent it.

WE : uniting as a community
WILL : creating positive, inspired change
GEN : recognizing today's students as leaders

PACER'S WE WILL Generation

©2013, PACER CENTER | PACER.org/WEWILLgen | WEWILLgen@pacer.org

The WE WILL Generation is a program of PACER'S National Bullying Prevention Center